

Abstract:

TAKING PART OF EXECUTIVE AUTHORITY WITH THE PARLIAMENT IN LEGISLATION IN THE PARLIAMENTARY SYSTEM

Achieves the parliamentary system that cooperation, balance and mutual influence between the authorities and a system that allows a great deal of functional overlap between the authorities and that some believe that the parliamentary system is the concept of the philosophical principle of separation of powers, which he referred to Montesquieu to flexible, separation of powers and achieve cooperation and participatory. valuable between authorities .

This taking part is considered a flexible practice found by the parliamentary System in the frame of occupational interference between the two reins Legislative and executive in this system.

That is to achieve the integration in industrialization of legislative work to Confront The development of the life and variety of its activities.

It was a study that inductive approach through A franc provisions of the Constitution of 1958 and the Egyptian constitution in 2014 and the Iraqi constitution in 2005 and the British Constitution analysis

In order to identify the concept of taking part between The two reins legislative and executive in the ordinary and exceptional reins .

We divided this thesis into three chapters:

- First chapter: definition of taking part in the parliamentary system
- and lies into two sections, we showed:-
  - Separation between the two reins in the parliamentary system.
  - Coincidences between the government
  - and the parliament in the parliamentary system.

- Second chapter : taking part between government
  - and the parliament in the legislation in the ordinary circumstances.
- I t lies in two sections we show the following:
- Right of enacting the rules.
  - Authentication of rules and issuing them.
-
- Third chapter: the government and the parliament taking part in legislation in exceptional circumstances.
- lies in three sections we showed the following:
- Secondary legislations.
  - Urgent legislation.
  - Surveillance on government legislation in exceptional circumstances.